Fucking joke I've just sent him an essay so he can get back to me next week when he's managed to read it

I know what he's said already. He also told me you were telling him you would turn the Xbox off if you didn't steal braydon's things or something. Says you encourage him to bully braydon. I said that's no excuse. I discourage any communication between those two and his teacher has separated them at James' request. I walked in yours this morning and he was sat in the pitch black on that thing. hadn't showered after football. 22:05 screen. He has mental health issues. It's not good for anyone let alone him. If you can't stop him going on that Xbox when you're not there to supervise then hide the pads. I'm trying to make sure he's constantly doing things, football swimming and jogging to improve his mental health. He has a limit of 1hr a day screen time here and we've noticed how much happier he is. You're making jokes about bullying and getting him to play with guns. He's in the wrong for what he's said but the whole environment at yours needs to change before it's too late. And before you become defensive I'm not arsed about any excuses like you're ill, tired or been working. Don't ask to see him if you can't be there to ensure he's well. Oh

Our son has mental health issues. Bottom line you won't say a word about this to James, you won't discipline him and you won't change. I don't expect anything. I will deal with it. We get out what we put in.
